Summary

I'm a Yale student interested in the intersection of strategy, storytelling, and systems-building across fintech, education, fashion, and digital media. My experience spans startup growth, branding, research, content development, and operations, and I'm especially drawn to roles where I can turn ideas into clear strategies, stronger systems, and audience-facing work that actually resonates. Through my work with early-stage ventures, student organizations, and research teams, I've supported projects involving CRM development, investor and market research, digital marketing, social media strategy, branding, multimedia content, and analytical reporting. I enjoy working in fast-paced environments where I can move between big-picture thinking and hands-on execution, whether that means building a workflow, shaping a brand message, creating content, or helping a team make sense of data. I'm especially excited by organizations that are rethinking how people learn, connect, shop, communicate, and move through the world. I'm always interested in opportunities across fintech, education, fashion, media, and digital-first brands; if you're interested in a chat, feel free to reach out at alexis.lam133@gmail.com or alexis.lam@yale.edu
